Final Exam

March 1, 2014

For my final exam, I created the Cold, Hard, Facts About Alcohol site. The site is intended to inform people of a few alcohol facts they might not have otherwise known. I kept the design clean; I didn't want it to distract from the main objective of the page (the info graphs).

I created the Logo using a combination of Drawscript and Canvas. I created a quick logo and using the drawscript plugin in Illustrator, allowed the canvas to draw out the image.

The two Data Visualizations I did were a pair of pie charts, and a jQuery animated chart. The pie charts go together as they show male vs female alcohol consumption. I used Google charts to create them, but they are not interactive. My Animated Data Vis is the chart about binge drinking. Clicking the show and hide buttons will animate the chart, giving a good visual representation about the information given.

I also added Two JQuery Animated Divs that appear on the page to help explain what each chart is talking about. Clicking the "explanation" buttons will toggle the hidden divs into view.

That's about it for my Final Exam. It was a challenging and time consuming exam, but I really do feel like I've learned a lot this month. Thanks for teaching and hopefully I will have you as an instructor for another upcoming class.
